

While working as a Project Manager in the Commercial Construction industry, Doug began working part-time for a local financial services organization in 1992. After about 1 year, he decided to leave Commercial Construction and started his career on a full-time basis in 1993. In 1997, however, a good friend coaxed him back to construction and he left the financial services industry to help build a local General Contracting firm acting as Vice President of Operations for several years.

Later, in 2008, Doug decided to come back into the world of finance and investments and is here to stay. Investing much of his time and effort learning about the needs of people in retirement, Doug has specialized in helping those age 55+ by first educating them on the choices available and then implementing a plan to Ensure their Lifestyle throughout their retirement.
